duct of troops, and to some, though less extent, that of some of the officers on each side, were spoken of. I well recollect even now, our own position, the field of battle, and the appearance of the infantry. We were upon the right of the infantry line: to our right, upon ground slightly elevated, a six gun battery. The 62nd Virginia, which formed the extreme left of the attack-ing force, advanced directly against us. To the right of the 62nd, were the cadets. The line of advance was a little diagonal to that of our formation, and as it was continued the 62nd passed ly to PRACTICAL OPTICIAN, HERBERT BRIANI, our front. Our fire, both that of artil lery and inputry, was rapid and conwith eanister, was destructive. As the advance was continued, it was apparent
